2 Corinthians 9:6-7 - The point is this: the one who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and the one who sows bountifully will also reap bountifully. Each of you must give as you have made up your mind, not reluctantly or under compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver.

This Week.....Reframe.....Your Thinking

What are your biggest sources of worry? Make a list of the top five things you worry about. What is it about these things that causes you such anxiety? What do you think these worries reveal about you? Has there ever been a time in your life where these worries accomplished anything?

Read Philippians 4:4-9. As you read these verses, what stands out to you? How does Paul's philosophy on worry contrast with your own? How does it make you feel to know that Paul wrote these words from a prison cell? In what ways does this give his words here added weight?

What are some ways we excuse (and maybe even justify) our anxiety? In what ways do our worries take our attention away from God? How do they reveal a lack of trust in Him?

Do you often think of prayer as the antidote to worry? Why or why not? How do you think praying "with thanksgiving" would change the way you face anxiety? How could it help bring you peace in those moments? What are some ways you can remind yourself that every worry is a wasted opportunity for prayer?

Read Matthew 6:25-34. How does worry divide our attention from what's really happening today? How does it take our attention off what God has already given us? What would it look like for you to seek the Kingdom first and trust Him with your troubles?
